APS CAM870 shotguns were already perhaps the most real and innovative shotguns on the market, but APS went and made them even better by releasing the CAM870 MKII. Mark 2, or MKII, has simplified the awesome shell ejecting design, making it a bit cheaper and waaay easier to use. But just as real and fun! Previously you had to use a very fiddly device to hold shells like a vice to charge them with CO2, but it's all gone. MKII is directly screwed onto the MK2 using the supplied nozzle and an 88 g CO2 cylinder (available separately). Together they act in the same way as a bottle of Pro Gas, filling up a regular GBB mag. MKII shells are holes that allow CO2 to travel through, blasting out your prepared selected ammo, cotton wool and sealing paper, just like the real thing. Shells are cheaper than before. So it's more affordable, easier to use, but as realistic and as epic as before, win the win! Zero One is the official UK distributor of the APS MKII System – CO2 is charged directly to the receiver and shells are easier to load. They may change WILDLY because of random changes made by the manufacturer from batch to batch, gas pressure, ambient temperature, battery charge and so on. Therefore, some figures should only be considered as a very loose manual or indication based solely on our on-the-spot checks. The listed images and product content are again based on a site check that we did at a certain time and may vary due to manufacturer changes, omissions, or inc. If you need something special, such as FPS, you need to specify it during ordering and, if necessary, use the adjustment option.
